HIGH SCHOOL NEWSPAPERS IN SOUTH CAROLINA

By Laurence R. Campbell
Director, Quill and Scroll Studies - 1974

The history of student journalism in South Carolina is primarily the history of high school newspapers. Much of the data about them was gathered by Elizabeth Grady Seyle in 1930 and Reid Montgomery in 1938.

Seyle in 1930 wrote a 41-page thesis entitled Student Publications in High Schools Of South Carolina. Montgomery in 1938 wrote a 103-page thesis entitled High-School Journalism in South Carolina.

In the South Caroliniana Library of the University of South Carolina "are several issues of the Sweetbriar Chronicle, 1872-76, carefully handwritten with pen illustrations by Miss Kate Obear for her Sweetbriar School at Winnsboro," reported E. L. Inabinett in 1967.

The collection also includes some high school newspapers, including the Columbia High School Hi-Life of 1914, according to the same source. It probably was the first printed newspaper in South Carolina high schools.

The first high school yearbook was published in 1916 by Greenville High School, according to Morris A. Kenig of Keys Printing Corporation. The South Carolina Schola tic Press Association for many years devoted its attention to yearbook staffs, but not to scholarly studies of them.
